

I'm outraged by Sinclair Broadcasting's directive to its stations that they air "Stolen Honor" in an attempt to influence the outcome of the Presidential election. Sinclair and other broadcasters are granted free use of the spectrum to serve the public interest, not to air political PR intended to influence an election.

This behavior is in sad contrast to CBS's decision NOT to air the well-researched 60 Minutes piece on the forged Iraq/Niger uranium documents before the election, and their admission that they erred in broadcasting the piece on Bush's National Guard service.

It's time for the FCC to hold broadcasters responsible for serving the public interest. Wake up!
